GM Sidebar Lock Decoder System

by Tom Thill

#TT-1 – $99.95

Tom Thill, the author of a new book, has invented an amazing new way to make keys for six cut GM Sidebar Locks.

The book describes a method which allows you to use a set of specially cut keys in the ignition. By turning the keys in the lock, one will become trapped. The key will only remove when you release the turning pressure. Then you use a second set of keys until the second key traps.

Each key is specially coded. In just a few minutes you will have identified the two keys which trapped in the lock. Simply look on the provided chart until you find the section that lists the two specific keys which trapped for you. Right there on the chart, you will be given several codes. One of those codes is the correct one for the key. In many instances you will be given only one code, which will be the exact one for the lock. His new system will save a great deal of time and trouble in those instances. The average time it takes to decode the lock with his new system is about 10 minutes, and sometimes faster.

The book includes full details of all the methods, and all the charts needed to insure that you may never have to tear down a GM column again and complete instructions and specifications which enable you to cut 130 of your own keyblanks using the precise specifications needed.

Do not confuse this decoder method with tryout keys. You are not creating tryout keys. You are creating carefully specified keys which exploit the sidebar lock to decode it by trapping a wafer. Then, knowing which two keys become trapped using the system, we give you the correct code for the lock.
